

GRANT ^[1]

Delphine Vermilya⁷, (Solomon⁶, Abram⁵, William⁴, Abraham³, John², Johannes¹) was probably born in New York about February 9, 1843,^[2] and baptized at the Baptist Church, Owego, Tioga, New York, on May 6, 1860.^[3] She died of consumption on May 6, 1897, in Fairmont Village, Martin, Minnesota.^[4] She married Ebenezer Benoni "Eben" Grant, son of George B. Grant and Martha M. Bemis, on December 5, 1866, in Silver Lake, Martin, Minnesota.^[5] He was probably born on April 10, 1846, in Malone, Franklin, New York.^[6] He died on August 19, 1937, in Glen Echo, Clackamas, Oregon.^[7] Glen Echo, also known as Echo Glen, is now a neighborhood in Gladstone, Oregon.

While some accounts, like the Oregon Daily Journal article shown below, contend Eben Grant was 14 years old when he enlisted August 30, 1862, as a drummer in Company H., 142nd Regiment, New York Volunteers, at Malone, Franklin County, New York, he was probably 16.

Eben's death certificate gives his date of birth as April 10, 1846. In his Pension File, Eben signed a declaration giving the same date. A date of birth in 1846 is reasonable given his enumeration as a three-year-old in the 1850 census. When other documents suggested that he was other than 16 at enlistment, a notation, "probably 16" was added.^[8]

The transcription was found in the attic of Gertrude (Grant) Goetz, wife of Charles Edward Goetz, when she died in Portland in 1961. Some of the entries are for events that happened after 1904 and cover a period ending with the death of Maud L. Grant on 02 March 1946. A few of the dates conflict with official vital records, although that conflict has not been found for Delphine's birthdate. The whereabouts of the original Bible is unknown.

⁸ "Lincoln Drummer Is for Wilson: Their Policies Alike, He Says," (Portland Oregon Daily Journal, 04 November 1916, p. 2, col. 4-5.

Although the minimum age for enlistment was 18, musicians were exempt from age requirements. At least forty thousand boys like him, in their teens, became drummers and fifers in the Union army. In a 1925 Declaration for Pension, Eben described himself then as a farmer, 5'5" tall, with light complexion, blue eyes and light hair. His Civil War Pension file, quoted throughout, provides a wealth of information about him and his family. ^[9]

A wonderful article appeared in the (Portland) Oregon Daily Journal in 1916 describing his service during the Civil War and political leanings: ^[10]

Lincoln Drummer Is for Wilson
Their Policies Alike, He Says
Lifelong Republican Who Played for Lincoln, Is to Cast Vote for Wilson.

Eben B. Grant, veteran of the Civil war, and president of the G. A. R. Fife and Drum corps, a lifelong Republican, will vote for the man in the coming election instead of the party and Woodrow Wilson will get his ballot.

An eventful history is contained in his life, and it is largely entwined around his beloved old drum. He enlisted in the Union army when but 14 [probably 16] years of age and his thrilling army experiences all took place before he became 18.

The drum was presented to him by his captain and company at a cost of $40, after his former one had deflected a bullet and saved his life.

Played for President Lincoln

The wooden hoops are now splintered and rough and age has stained the skins and leather sides, while a second bullet has left its mark, but when hung from its owner's belt the drum still retains much of its original appearance and serves to recall to old veteran's mind the strains of "Hail to the Chief" played by his fife and drum corps, at the review by President Lincoln of the troops after the siege of Petersburg.

It has been across the county three times and has seen service as a trunk for its owner, when a more convenient container for his cloths was not to be had. ^[11]

Serving Under Grant

Showing that his youthful age was not uncommon in the army at that time (he is now but 68), Eben Grant recounts the fact that three quarters of the soldiers were under 21 years of age, a million and a half were under 18, and 25 boys were less than 10 years old.

Eben Grant is still hearty and spry, in spite of the fact that he was in the eight months' siege of Petersburg, the siege of Charlestown, and with his namesake, General Grant, at Cold Harbor.

His first ballot was cast for Lincoln when he was 16, which he was able to do through special suffrage legislation enacted for soldiers by congress.

"Wilson's policies come nearest to being like those of Lincoln," he says, "than those of any president under my observation during the intervening time, and his constructive legislation merits his second term."

"Our president today advocates the best progressive measures for the people that can be expected." Grant asserted, "He has enacted legislation for the benefit of the people and not for the classes. All these things have won me over to Wilson and I am glad I am helping to elect the man who is going to win.”

In 1881, Dr. David McFalls, the Surgeon for the 142nd Regiment said, “He was a sound, healthy man at the time of his enlistment,” but suffered a series of disorders during the War that left him with various disabilities. Dr. McFalls related his knowledge of Eben’s service by saying:

That on or about the 10th of Feb’y 1863, the said Eben B. Grant was taken sick with “lung fever”, while in the Service and in line of duty, while the Regiment was stationed near Arlington Heights in the State of Virginia and was sent to Fairfax Seminary General Hospital by deponent on the 14th day of February 1863. That on or about July 8th or 10th 1863, the said Eben B. Grant was injured by a collision on the cars about sixteen miles out of Washington, D.C. on the way to the battle of Gettysburg, and he with fifteen other injured soldiers were sent back to Washington, D.C. The extent of his injuries by this break-up on the cars deponent does not now remember, as there was no record made of the nature and extent of the injuries that each one sustained.

Interestingly, Eben also gave an account of his injuries in a letter written March 16, 1918, to the Commissioner of Pensions:

Dear Sir;

Enclosed I send papers back with Doctors affidavit in the case now as to the date I had the measles. I have no record, do not remember just when it was, only about the time I had them, but think it was while we were with Gen. Butler’s Army on the James. I belonged to the 10th Army Corp, at that time. I remember the Hospital they took me to was near the James River, one thing I remember where they took me the cots were all full except one ward that was used for Negro Troops and they put me in their (sic) for a few days until their (sic) was a vacancy in the White Ward, in the change I took cold and the measles went back on me and the Dr. said he did not think I could live but I pulled through but it settled in my eyes and on my lungs, and I was in bad shape for a long time in fact I have never got over the effects of it entirely, my memory has gone back on me so much that these events seam (sic) more like a dream, but you have my Pension affidavits, made years ago that must have given the dates more clearly. The injury to my back and head was in a Railroad wreck near Washington, a Troop Train ran into another train loaded with soldiers on the way out to join Gen. Mead’s forces in the Gettysburg campaign.

The Atlas Editions; Civil War Cards (“MEASLES”) ^[12] reminds us that:

When volunteers mustered for service in Civil War armies, vast numbers of them were immediately struck down by communicable diseases. The first of the epidemics to sweep through the ranks was usually measles. Measles would have a devastating effect on an army. In one Confederate camp of 10,000 men, 4,000 soldiers were stricken with measles, and the savage onset of the disease was something that astonished everyone, even the surgeons. The disease was so common and disruptive that new units were held back from active service until they had been "put through the measles". Because men from urban areas were more likely to have been exposed to the disease at an early age, measles caused the most serious problem in units raised from rural areas.

An epidemic of measles usually ran its course in three or four weeks, and while a person living under normal circumstances would usually recover with no lasting effects, in army camps the childhood disease often proved to be fatal. Improper care and poor sanitation would lead to complications such as pneumonia.

Surgeons often prescribed whiskey, but a combination of rest, proper care, and time was the only true treatment for the disease.

An online database, American Civil War Regiments (Historical Data Systems) describes the service of the 142 Infantry Regiment, New York: ^[13]

This regiment, recruited in the counties of St. Lawrence and Franklin, rendezvoused at Ogdensburg, and was there mustered into the U. S. service on Sept. 29, 1862, for three years. The regiment left for Washington on Oct. 6, where it was stationed until April of the following year, when it was ordered to Suffolk, Va.

During its long period of active service, the 142nd gloriously earned its reputation as a fighting regiment. Col. Fox in his account of this organization says: "It participated in the campaign of Gordon's division, up the Peninsula in June (1863), and in the Maryland march, soon after Gettysburg. From Warrenton, Va., the regiment went to Morris Island, S. C., arriving there on Aug. 17, 1863.

In the following May, the 142nd returned to Virginia and joined Butler's Army of the James, having been assigned to the 1st brigade, 2nd division (Turner's), 10th corps. While at Cold Harbor the division was attached for a short time to the 18th corps. The losses in the regiment at Drewry's bluff and Bermuda Hundred were 19 killed, 78 wounded and 22 missing; at Fort Harrison, 6 killed, 51 wounded and 10 missing; and at the Darbytown road, 8 killed, 90 wounded and 5 missing.

In Dec. 1864, the 10th was merged in the newly-formed 24th corps, the regiment being placed in Curtis' (1st) brigade, Ames' (2nd) division. In the same month, this division, including the 142nd, sailed with Butler on the first expedition against Fort Fisher, N. C.

Eben described the efforts to overcome Fort Fisher in an interview published in the (Portland) Oregon Sunday Journal, September 15, 1935: ^[14]

'61 Drummer Keeps Sticks; Recalls Fights

Seventy years ago Eben B. Grant, drummer boy, was mustered out of the Grand Army of the Republic at the age of 19.

Today the proudest possessions of Eben Grant, who lives quietly a short distance from Milwaukie, are a pair of ebony drumsticks and the memory that he played "Hail the Chief" for Abraham Lincoln.

Leaves from his memories make a vivid picture of Civil war days. With the keen eye of youth--this 89-year-old veteran believes the Union army was more than half made up of boys under 21-- he noted every detail of the operations in which his outfit, the New York Volunteer infantry, was engaged.

Probably the most vivid of all are the pictures which the name of Fort Fisher bring back over the years since December 1864, when after two years in uniform and a short hospitalization, the young drummer rejoined his outfit in North Carolina.

The Cape Fear river, he recalls, heads in the Great Dismal Swamp--names which in themselves are gruesome enough to chill a soldier still in his teens. The river runs parallel to the ocean for many miles, and on the strip of land between lies Wilmington, N. C. Closer still to the mouth was Fort Fisher, last of the Confederate seaboard forts to fall.

ONE PORT OPEN

At that late stage of the war, Eben Grant says, the Union blockade has closed every Atlantic port to the Confederacy except Wilmington, protected by Fort Fisher's mighty guns. Once past the Union patrol boats a blockade runner could proceed upstream to Wilmington safe from pursuit, for Cape Fear river was broad and deep.

General U. S. Grant decided this final leak must be plugged. He ordered Admiral Porter to concentrate all the Union vessels at Fort Fisher to join him in shelling the fort while troops were unloaded from transports into small boats and then landed in the surf under shelter of a terrific barrage.

HAD 60 VESSELS

"Porter's fleet consisted of more than 60 war vessels," Eben Grant estimates, "including monitors, ironsides and frigates. They took part in the bombardment while we landed about a mile above the fort on open beach.

"History says it was the greatest cannonade the world had witnessed to that time. More than 50 shells a minute were fired into the fortifications. The fort was a large one, over a mile and a half long and equipped with bomb-proof cells. The rebels were safe from the gunfire as long as they stayed within, but the shelling was so fierce they could not get men out to man the guns."

FLAW IN MANEUVER

There was a flaw, however, in that epic maneuver.

General Butler had joined the attacking party without orders but took charge because he was ranking officer. In the middle of the foray he decided the position was too strong to be taken by infantry and ordered the forces to re-embark.

The soldiers scrambled back into the open surf in the face of a mounting gale and were hauled aboard small boats which took them out to the larger vessels in a rough sea. After some difficulty, young Grant reached a supply ship.

IN BAD SHAPE

"The vessel dragged its anchor until the bow of a boat close by began to stave in the stern of our boat," he recalled. "They started the propeller on our ship to get away and in the tangle our rudder was torn off. We were in bad shape, but we had two masts and with the sails managed to keep out to sea.

"Our crippled ship was towed to Fort Monroe. Two weeks later General Grant determined to try again. He had removed Butler and put General Terry in command.

"I won't try to describe the final capture of Fort Fisher, for it was in your history book. However, I will say it was the strongest fort in America, mounting 42 large cannon. It was several hours after our troops charged and captured the north end of the fort before the rebels surrendered."

There followed shortly afterwards the surrender of Wilmington itself, and then the surrender of General Robert E. Lee. "It seemed the best news we had ever heard, to hear we could go home again and see mother and friends," the drummer boy remembers.

His drum, one given him by comrades of his company after his first instrument was destroyed in action, is now in the historical exhibit in the Portland city hall, but the drumsticks, likewise a treasured gift, are in his own possession. ^[15]

"In 1864 all the soldiers in the field were allowed to vote for president regardless of age," Grant says. "So I cast my first vote for Abraham Lincoln. More than half the Union army were boys under 21, but they were filling men's places in defense of their country.

"I know we all voted and I think 90 per cent voted for Lincoln. He was universally loved by the soldier boys."

After mustering out in June 1865, Eben returned to his home in New York and soon traveled to Martin County, Minnesota, where, on December 5, 1866, he married Delphine Vermilya. ^[16] The 1870 Census (enumerated on June 28, 1870) finds them residing near Fairmont, Martin County, at Silver Lake (East Chain Lakes Post Office). The census lists Eben and Delphine's two living children: Emma and Gertrude. ^[17] They lost an infant son, Rodman, the previous January. ^[18]

By 1880, the census reflects five additional children: Maud, "Earnest", Otis Leroy, "Berthy", and "John" – born in May 1880. ^[19] The name "John" appears to correspond to birth records for Clarence E. Grant, born May 14, 1880. ^[20]

Delphine died from consumption on May 6, 1897 and was buried at Fairmont in Lakeside Cemetery. ^[21] Eben learned the carpenter trade, was an oil inspector, and city clerk at Fairmont. ^[22]

¹⁵ Norman Goetz (Portland, Oregon) to Steve Dahlstrom (San Antonio, Texas), email, 17 November 2017, "It was Eben's damaged drum which was displayed in Portland City Hall, not the replacement drum. He still had and used his original ebony drumsticks which are now in possession of his great grandson Ronald Lightowler, son of Joyce Grant."

The Chehalis-Bee newspaper ("Social and Personal Items")^[28] commented on a visit the Grant's undertook in 1922, when it said:

Eben Grant and wife of Portland are visiting at the home of the former's brother, George Grant of Chehalis (Washington). Eben Grant was a drummer during the Civil War and recently was one of the attractions at the Oregon State fair at Salem. He is 77 years of age and enjoys good health.

Ella Grant died, almost two years later, on September 8, 1924.^[29] Her obituary read:

Mrs. Ella Grant.^[30]

OREGON CITY, Or., Sept. 8. —(Special.)—Mrs. Ella Grant, wife of E. B. Grant, prominent resident of Gladstone, died at the Grant home Sunday, after a brief illness. Mrs. Grant was born at Westberry, R. I., March 8, 1858, and has been a resident of Oregon for many years. She is survived by her widower, E. B. Grant, of Gladstone; a daughter, Mrs. Eula Hinds of Gladstone, and sons, E. M. Kellogg of Portland, and Elmo Kellogg of Alameda, Cal.

Eben's Civil War Pension file contains many letters and documents detailing the extent of his injuries. One of the most compelling was written by Eben on July 14, 1925, to the Hon. Winfield Scott, Commissioner of Pensions:

I will try and write down my troubles as required. I had a sick spell in the fall of 1923; do not remember the exact date, but one of my troubles that has bothered me for several years, bladder trouble, got worse after that sickness. Now I am bothered to death with it, cannot urinate but a little at a time, have to run 40 or 50 times a day to keep out of misery. My other trouble is dizziness, which has bothered me for a year or more. It comes over me all of a sudden and everything is in a whirl for a short time and then goes away partly but never entirely free from this dizziness. After I have lain down a while and then get up everything is in a whirl and I have to wait a little before I can get up and walk. I have fallen and hurt myself several times from this trouble. My wife, Ella Grant was my constant companion and took care of me until she died Sept. 7, 1924, then my unmarried daughter, Maud Grant, had to give up a good (position) in Portland and come to take care of me as I was in no shape to be left alone. My only income was my $50 month pension and I could not hire someone to stay with me and live. I am not bed ridden, but have to lay down a good deal of my time. I cannot give a doctors affidavit as I have not employed any (regular) doctor since the one I used to have died. If you want any more evidence I can furnish plenty from neighbors.

Respect(fully) /s/ Eben B. Grant, Gladstone, Oregon.

As one can imagine, Maud had her own perspective on these matters and she also wrote a letter, two days later, on July 16, 1925:

I, Maud Grant of Gladstone, Oregon, aged 53 years, herewith give my testimony in regard to the condition of my father, Eben B. Grant.

I have visited him frequently since November 1923, when he was first taken sick and while his mental condition was good, he has been at times very bad physically.

In September 1924, my step-mother died and I left the place where I was working to care for him at his home in Gladstone, as he could not live alone. I have been his attendant since.

Since my father's sickness in 1923, he has had bladder trouble in a very aggravated form.

At the time of my step-mother's last sickness, my father had another severe illness, since which time he has had dizzy spells and his hearing has been very bad.

He is able to be around most of the time, but there are times when he is confined to his bed.

These dizzy spells and bladder trouble are becoming more frequent and severe.

He is also troubled with a cough a great deal of the time.

/s/ Maud Grant, Gladstone, Oregon

Although these descriptions paint a grim picture, Eben lived another 12 years, finally passing away from chronic myocarditis (inflammation of the heart muscle) at Glen Echo, Oregon, on August 19, 1937.^[31] His obituary read:

Eben B. Grant, Soldier At 16, Dies in Oregon^[32]

Oldtimer Served 3 Years in Civil War, Homesteaded in Martin County Before He Was 21 Years Old.

Eben B. Grant, Civil war drummer, brother of Mrs. Hattie Perry of Fairmont, died Aug. 19 at his home at Gladstone, Oregon. He was 91 years old last April.

Mr. Grant was prominent here, especially in G. A. R. circles, from the earliest days until he moved to Oregon about thirty years ago. His old drum was famous in parades and at entertainments. At a birthday party given in his honor on his ninety-first birthday he played it with all the oldtime vigor. He enjoyed good health and strength until the past few weeks.

Mr. Grant enlisted for Civil war service at the age of 16, in August of 1862, in Co. H. 142nd New York Infantry. He served until June of 1865. He was but 19 years of age after completing three years of severe war service.

In the same year that he was discharged from the army Mr. Grant came with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Grant and other members of the family, from his birthplace, Malone, New York, to Martin county. They homesteaded in East Chain, but later Mr. Grant moved to Fairmont.

Before he was 21 Mr. Grant had served three years as a soldier, voted for Abraham Lincoln in the field, filed on a homestead, was happily married and living happily in his own sod shanty.

Mr. Grant survived two wives. In his latter years his daughter Maud maintained his home. Other surviving children are Mrs. C. E. Goetz (Gertrude), Portland; Clarence E. Grant, a Spanish war veteran, Gladstone; Mrs. Alex Gill (Bertha) Gladstone. A sister, Mrs. P. H. Stedman, lives at Emmetsburg, Iowa.

Full military honors were accorded Mr. Grant at this funeral.

His death leaves George Murray as the only survivor of Phil Kearney post, G. A. R., the Fairmont post disbanded some years ago.

Mrs. Goetz ^[41]

Teacher of Piano and Voice is Woman of Exceptional Ability and Attainment

Mrs. Goetz was born in Fairmont, Minn., and received her education not only in the grade and high schools of that city, but privately.

We found her to be an extremely interesting woman, a woman well worth knowing.

She has taught in both high and grade schools and at one time was governess in the home of Captain R. E. Jensen, founder of the Swedish colony in Northern Iowa. She is a vocal and piano teacher, but makes a specialty of the piano, preferably class work.

Mrs. Goetz took a course of two years with Mr. Belcher and one year with Kathleen Lawler. For three years she taught music in Milwaukie grade and high schools, and organized an orchestra among the students, directing two operettas in which 65 high school students took part. During the last three years she has taken the University Extension course and has a state certificate for musical analysis and history and has also taken a course under Mrs. Clifford Moore in fundamental music training. She was choir director and soloist at the Marshall Street Presbyterian church for two years. We should judge Mrs. Goetz to be a thoroughly well qualified and conscientious teacher of the piano.

Mrs. Goetz has four fine sons: Carl, who is at the Oregon Agricultural College, taking a course in agriculture; Donald, is in the auditing department of the Federal Reserve Bank;

Vernon works at the Municipal Garage; while Kenneth is with the Western Electric Company. All these boys are musicians having mastered the violin, flute, cornet, clarinet and 'cello.

Mr. Goetz, who was formerly Deputy Sheriff of McClean County, North Dakota, is now superintendent of the Municipal Garage.

This interesting family came to Portland 14 years ago.

It is also worthy of note that Mrs. Goetz' father, who is now living at Gladstone, enlisted in the army when only 15 [probably 16] years of age, and was drummer boy in the Civil War and had the honor of playing before President Lincoln. He is director of the Oregon City Fife and Drum Corps.

- V. Ernest Willard was born on February 14, 1873, in Minnesota. Although his death certificate gives his birth year as 1872, Ernest's father gave the year as 1873 in a Civil War pension application and that agrees with the 1880 census where he is listed as seven years old. He died on January 22, 1944, in Merced, Merced County, California (burial at Masonic Cemetery). He married Adalade "Addie" Jackson, daughter of Cornelius Jackson and Rebecca Hartman, on September 16, 1894, in Fairmont, Martin, Minnesota. She was born about 1869 in Minnesota. Although her year of birth is given as 1872 on her death certificate, and her gravestone gives 1870, she appears in the 1870 census as one-year old, suggesting her birth year was 1869. She died on January 12, 1955, in Merced, Merced County, California (a resident of El Portal, Mariposa, California - burial in Masonic Cemetery, Merced). ^[55] Children: (1) Leigh Stanley was born on July 10, 1895, in ⁱ Unable to locate a record that confirms the marriage of Wallis Pinson Gullic and Evelyn Edith Grant who were living in Mariposa County, California, in 1940.

ⁱⁱ Clarence E. Grant was a Spanish American War veteran. He received an invalid pension (application 1561710, certificate no. A-8-1-27). He served in Company D, 12th Reg't, Minnesota Infantry. A Freedom of Information Act request has been filed, but a response has not been received concerning the whereabouts of the file.

ⁱⁱⁱ Attempts to determine the date and place of marriage for Clarence and Mamie Grant have been unsuccessful. The 1910 census indicates they had been married 6 years, and they appear to have been living in Missouri at the time.

^{iv} It is said that James Otis Grant married Helene Marie Smestad on March 24, 1934 at Kelso, Cowlitz County, Washington. Neither Oregon or Washington marriage indexes contain any mention of this union.
